Large Economic Losses Declared Due to Arbitrary Limits-Examples Are Cited

NEW YORK-A unique organization which seeks to find productive employment for persons who have passed the age limit specified in certain classes of industry, has just completed its first year of operation

Under the leadership of a New York business executive, who as-sumed the picturesque title of "Mr. Action," the movement embarked with a two-fold aim. Its first purpose was to find jobs for those who needed them. The second purpose was to establish a new standard of fitness for service which would be based upon experience and capability, rather than upon arbitrary age

For some time "Mr. Action." although he appeared publicly on numerous occasions, refused to reveal

Counties' Wool Pool Yields Advanced Price

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

ROCKBRIDGE and Nelson counties' wool pool, loaded and shipped at Lexington, Va., brought a considerable advance over wool sold locally. A total of 26,811 pounds was weighed, inspected, and loaded on cars. The price paid was $54.30 per 100 pounds. From this was deducted 70 cents handling expense, leaving a net price paid to the growers of $53.60.

Prices paid locally have ranged from 40 to 52 cents per pound. The saving made to growers by the pool may therefore be estimated at $950. The pool was purchased by a dealer of Roanoke, and shipped direct to woolen mills. The pool was spon-sored by the Virginia Division of Markets, working through the county agent of Rockbridge.

Crisp finds his appeals lag. But the of his speech brings a demonstration which surprises and puzzles the uninitiated. For not only the banners of Georgia, Alabama and Florida join in the procession, but most of the other southern states, even those with candidates of their own. Clearly it is the beginning of the dry anti-Smith protest in which the whole South is united.

Aisles Fill Suddenly The aisles are suddenly filled with men and women, obviously not delegates, waving flags and carrying themselves with a gravity of de-meanor not common in conventions. A great streamer, 20 feet long, borne four men, bearing the historic words of Andrew Jackson, "The Constitution must be preserved," heads the procession.

The demonstration lasts half anhour and is with difficulty quelled long enough to enable Arizona to yield to New York. Then it breaks out again but among a very different group of delegates.

At the front of the platform stands Franklin D. Roosevelt. A fierce out-burst of cheers greets the man who is to put in nomination the Governor

It is not the custom in national conventions to seek to controvert the arguments or to disprove the state-ments of an adversary. The champions of the aspirants eulogize their own heroes, but make no assault on the candidacies of the others. But for this, some later speaker might comment on Mr. Roosevelt's argument that governors make efficient presidents. He proves this by citing the cases of Cleveland, Roosevelt and

Tammany Opposition

Woodrow Wilson

Unhappily there will be no one to rise and point out that Tammany, whose favorite Sachem is to be nominated in this convention, fought each one of these statesmen, both as candidate and as President.

Like most convention orators, Mr. Roosevelt speaks a little too long. The attention of his auditors lags. His best periods get but a perfunctory round of applause. His irony, delivered in so rasping a tone as to give the speech a distinctly disagreeable note, falls flat. But we know that there awaits his peroration such an outburst from well drilled cohorts as will make ample amends for any earlier impatience. At last it comes:
"We offer one who has the will to win—who not only deserves success but commands it. Victory is his habit —the happy warrior — Alfred E. Smith!" And then it comes.

The lid is off. The New York delegates, led by the veteran Norman E. Mack, are on their chairs in a minute

There has been much talk about

that really means something to the

Automobile Owner

THERE'S a deal of talk these days about the engineering back of this or that car. Most of it covers a multitude of sins or the lack of something definite to talk about in the cars them-

Even in the face of this situation, we want to tell you what Reo engineering means to the buyer of a Reo Flying Cloud. Because Reo engineering can be measured by Reo owners in terms of dollars and cents, of performance and comfort.

Here, precisely, are some of the facts about Reo engineering.

1. Reo engineers have the same experimental facilities that are available in any laboratory. This means that Reo engineers test carefully and select materials and parts that they know have the strength and the durability necessary to uphold the Reo reputation for long life.

2. Reo engineers will not content themselves with the road tests possible in a limited testing area. Before the first Flying Cloud ever started down the production lines, Flying Cloud engines, Flying Cloud brakes, Flying Cloud clutches, transmissions, steering gears, axles-every integral parthad been subjected to hundreds of thousands of miles of terrific punishment on the highways of the Middle West, through the sands of the deserts, over the rocky trails of the Sierras, through the muds of Louis ana bottom

3. Reo engineers are admitted leaders in their field. There may be-probably are-others of equal skill and foresight. But Reo engineers are unique in their freedom to develop their ideas and put into effect their plans. For Reo engineers are unrestricted by a financial policy, built of necessity around a huge indebtedness; Reo engineers are unhampered by the production problems imposed inevitably by a large, immobile plant, and Reo engineers are supported by a capable production personnel whose loyalty to Reo is reflected by the lowest rate of labor turn-over in the industry.

4. Because of these conditions, Reo engineers are free to take advantage of new developments quickly, free to pass these along to Reo buyers more promptly, free to direct the production of automobiles which embody engineering ideals rather than production requirements.

These facts about Reo engineering will take on additional significance the moment you compare Reo Flying Cloud performance, comfort, ease and construction with any other car. There's one near you-try it for your-

After the dramatic coup d'état by which he came into power he refused both the Presidency and the Premiership, and only later he decided to accept the latter post owing to the difficulty of finding a suitable man for the job. Campaign Supporting Proposed Treaty

Under the slogans that "war will disappear from the earth when women decide that the time has come," and that the United States should "build friendships, not warships, for national defense," the Massachusetts Committee on the Cause and Cure of War has organized for an educational campaign to further the fortunes of the Kellogg Multilateral Treaty. The meeting was held under the auspices of the National Committee, composed of nine national organizations, representing some 12,000,000 women. The Massachusetts commit tee comprises local representatives of these nine national organizations.

This movement is not confined to the United States, Miss Hopkinson said. Twenty-three organizations in Great Britain have united in a committee to conduct a similar drive there. They, too, will have a conference in the fall, at which representatives of the United States are ex-pected, just as visitors from England will attend the conference in New York at the same time. terest in making backyards into playgrounds, the Buffalo City Planning Association is sponsoring a backyard playground contest. By means of small prizes offered in each of the nine councilmanic districts for playgrounds of outstanding merit, they hope to bring home to parents the ease with which yards formerly used for ash cans and clothes poles can be made into attractive places for the children to play.

Backyard Playground Committee of The Buffalo City Planning Association, said that construction and design, safety, low cost, originality and usefulness will be the basis on which the playgrounds will be judged.

"Last year we made such a good beginning with our contest," Miss Cabana said, "that we are expecting even better results this year. Playgrounds were established in back-yards in districts where there was no place for the children to play for miles around. We wish that there was a public playground within a quarter of a mile of every home, but that is a future ideal.

"In the meantime, we feel that any community or organization can do much for the welfare of the children by sponsoring backyard playgrounds. That is one of the reasons why we have greatly enlarged the scope of

NEW DUTY THREATENS CANADIAN QUARRIES

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO HALIFAX, N. S .- Unless the duty imposed by the United States Government on the products of Nova Scotia's gypsum quarries entering the markets of the United States is revoked, the companies at present operating in this Province will be forced to go out of business, in the opinion of mining engineers who are gathered here for the annual convention of the Mining Society of Nova Scotia. The seriousness of the situation that has arisen as the result of this duty, which becomes effective on July 2, was shown by various delegates who pointed out that over 5000 men will be thrown out of work.

Production of gypsum in Nova Scotia last year totaled over 900,000 tons or nine-tenths of the total production of the whole of Canada, but with the new duty in effect, the production, it is said, will fall off by at least 80 per cent.

Very often folks discover they have been working a lifetime at good pay, but have nothing to show for it.

Take inventory now, and resolve to make proper provision for the future.

The easiest and safest way is by means of a savings account.

The principal room of the club, 80 feet in length, has the original ceil-ing of molded oak beams, which had been covered with lath and plaster for many years. In the lounge below is a 20-light window frame of molded oak from the adjacent building occupied by the Paston family.

The Strangers' Hall in Charing Cross is associated with the sixteenth century Duke of Norfolk, who welcomed the "Strangers" in his palace near by and gave them his protection. Today the Strangers' Club will welcome the strangers within the gates. The City of Norwich owes much to its strangers, the Flemings, the Dutch and the Walloons of the past. And the founders of the Strangers' Club hope that the strangers of today may, in like manner, bear their part in forwarding the city's welfare.

GERMAN POLICY ON REPARATIONS UNDER ANALYSIS

Swedish Economist Debates Payment by Foreign Loans at Harris Institute

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BURBAU CHICAGO-Germany's practice of paying reparations with foreign loans, followed since the acceptance of the Dawes Plan, is an unsound procedure, "necessarily to be terminated within the shortest possible time," Gustav Cassel, professor of Motor Coaches and Traction economics of Stockholm, Sweden, told the Harris Foundation Institute of Politics here.

Payment by actual transfer of goods, however, brings forth prob-lems which Germany's creditors must face, this international authority pointed out in his address.

Workers Benefit by Decree in Peru

Employers Must Give Three Months' Notice in Case of Dismissal

LIMA, Peru-Employers in Peru must give three months' notice of dismissal of an employee and also provide an insurance policy after four years' service, under a pres-idential decree regulating the employment law, defining relations between employers and labor. The decree defines in great detail the duty of employers. It declares absence of .. man from his work must be willful and continue for three consecutive days to provide a valid cause for discharge.

Manifest or veiled hostility of an employer or unreasonable treatment may be considered a technical dismissal enabling the worker to collect three months' pay, the decree says. In the event of an employer beoming bankrupt, workmen's claims to 50 per cent of his normal assets constitute a preferential lien on available assets.

Young Folk

HAT strides our young folk are making! Only this year we have heard of three outstanding cases of boys and who have achieved quite remarkable success in England alone. The first is that of a boy who has been appointed a church organist. Caleb Fawcett is only 11 years old, and lives at Merrow in Surrey, his home being divided from the church by a lovely little valley. In 1818 he took up the study of In 1818 he took up t The original idea for such a treaty came from the French Foreign Minister, Aristide Briand, who proposed that France and the United States should come to an agreement renouncing and outlawing all possibility of war between these two countries in the case of any dispute aris-ing. Mr. Kellogg in turn proposed that all other nations who wished to sign such a pact should be invited to do so, and this idea has been warmly received, especially by those nations which have so lately suf-fered from all the horrors of war and realized what a stupid and ineffectual method it is of solving

Certain difficulties have been raised by other nations in the course of conversations backwards and forwards about the proposed treaty. It was objected that it made no mention of the right of self-defense, but Mr. Kellogg's answer to this objection is that such a right is "injection is "injection is "injection is "injection is "injection is "injection herent in every sovereign state and implicit in every treaty."

It was also felt by certain states that if one of the powers signing the treaty broke its promise, the other states must then be set free. This phiection has now been met in the preamble of the treaty which expressly states that if one of the signatory powers "seeks to promote its national interests by resort to war" this would at once free all other signatory nations from their obligations to that state.

Other difficulties raised were the bligations of states to the League of Nations, and as signatories of the Locarno treaties and other pacts. Mr Kellogg's answer is that the Out-lawry of War treaty does not really

Stock Market Moves Irregularly Upward-Some Issues Soar

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)-Price movements lacked uniformity in to-day's stock market but the general trend continued upward. Maintenance of relatively stiff call money rates tended to restrict trading and stimulated profit-taking in a few of the recent strong spots.

The call money renewal rate of 7½ per cent was the highest since June, 1921. Banks called $20,000,000 in loans during the morning with funds re-ported to be scarcer than they have been at any time since the "money The New York Federal Reserve

The New York Federal Reserve Bank announced the receipt of $8,000,000 in gold from Canada. Little hope is held out in banking quarters for any easing of money until around the middle of July, with present indications of a 6 per cent minimum for the rest of the summer.

Declaration of a $2 extra dividend on Jersey Central was one of the few interesting financial developments of the day. While Wall Street generally was inclined to pay little attention to politics as a market factor, the heavy accumulation of General Motors, which advanced more than three points, was widely attributed to purchases for the account of John J. Raskob and other friends of Govefnor Smith.

Case Threshing soared 12 points to 320 and then fell back to 315. Warren Brothers climbed 11½ points, and American Encaustic Tiling, Brooklyn Edison, du Pont, American Express and Radio sold 4 to nearly 6 points higher. Brisk accumulation also was noted in Kelvinator, Montgomery Ward and Cudahy Packing.

United States Steel, American Smelting, Allied Chemical. American Can, Greeng Cananea Copper and sales.

The closing was strong. The influence of high money rates and uncertainty of the showing of brokers' loans after the close of the market, which had a retarding effect on earlier confidence, gradually waned in the last hour, when important stocks moved up substantially.

United States Steel crossed 138, General Motors sold above 184 and General Motors sold above 184, and Case Threshing Machine at 138 was up 30 points.

Total sales approximated 1,600,000 Foreign exchanges opened firm, with sterling cables quoted around $4.87%. High money rates continued to cast their restraining influence upon trading in the bond market today. The volume of sales was small, and price changes were fractionally downward. While there was more time money available, banks called more than $20,000,000 in loans, and no easing in the time rate was forthcoming. the time rate was forthcoming.

Railroad obligations attracted most buying, but the turnover was small.
Industrials were largely neglected and prices soft. The easing tendency was noticeable also in the foreign list. United States Government obligations were a bit

LAND BANK DIVIDEND

Directors of the New York Joint Stock Land Bank, Rochester, N. Y., have declared a dividend out of earnings at the annual rate of 6 per cent for the six months period ended June 30. This marks the beginning of dividends by the new management, as the stock was not upon a dividend basis when the present ownership assumed control in April, 1927.

NEW YORK, June 28 (P)—Net operating income of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe dropped to $1.714.830 from $2.684.612 in May 1927, and for five months this year to $11,448.662 from $17.745.698 in the corresponding 1927 period.

EARNINGS OF VACUUM OIL

Profits Exceeding $6 Share
Forecast — Carrying On Expansion Program

Oil trade reports indicate that Vacuum Oil Company's earnings this year will exceed those of 1927. Demand for its principal products, lubricating oils, has shown an upward trend in line with other refined oils.

Selling prices of lubricants fluctuate only slightly. On the other hand, the company as a buyer and refiner of crude oil continues to benefit by low prices prevailing for that grade of petroleum.

Despite depressed conditions in the oil industry last year, Vacuum reported record net earnings of $25,558, 1999, or $10.17 a share on the 2512,3x2 shares of stock outstanding. It was one of the few oil companies to report increased income for that period. In 1926, its net profits were $24,133,655, or $8.65 a share on 2,498,832 shares.

Early in 1928 the company increased its authorized capital stock to 7,000,000 shares, from 2,800,000 shares, both $25 par. A 100 per cent stock dividend was distributed later, bringing the number of outstanding shares to 5,024,764, based on 1927 balance sheet. This is the company's only capital obligation, funded debt having been retired in 1926.

Last year's earnings were equivalent to $5.09 a share on increased number of shares. As the company proports of shares. As the company proports

5,024,764, based on 1927 balance sheet. This is the company's only capital obligation, funded debt having been retired in 1926.

Last year's earnings were equivalent to $5.09 a share on increased number of shares. As the company reports only yearly, it is too early accurately to gauge 1928 results, but current forecasts place the year's profits at better than $6 a share.

Dividend Rate Increased

Vacuum recently placed its increased stock on a $3 yearly dividend basis. Previously, the old stock paid $5 a share yearly, including extras, or equivalent of $2.50 a share on the present stock. Action of directors in raising the dividend rate, after payment of 100 per cent stock dividend, is considered an intimation of their confidence in the continuance of the company's excellent earning power. company's excellent earning power.

cedure has been to pay a special yearend extra. A special extra of $1 a share was paid on the old stock in the final quarter of 1927.

Aside from its strong earning power, justification for the 100 per cent stock dividend payment was found in the company's 1927 balance sheet, where surplus of $81,717,232 exceeded the $62,809,550 capitalization by nearly $19,000,000. Working capital at the end of last year was $81,347,514, of which $22,103,587 was cash and securities.

Increase in its authorized stock placed Vacuum in a position to follow through a program of expansion. After payment of the stock dividend, and a relatively small amount of stock for employees' stock ownership, some 1,600,000 shares were available for acquisitions of properties or interests in other companies. Negotiations looking toward a union with Medway oil

Funded Debt: Ten-Year Convertible 6% Gold Debentures (this issue), Capital Stock: Common Stock, no par value; authorized, 2,750,000 shares to be reserved for conversion 2,200,000 shares

From his letter General Avery D. Andrews, President, further summarizes as follows:

COLON OIL CORPORATION, a Delaware corporation, was organized by the Royal Dutch-Shell Group and Carib Syndicate, Ltd., to take over the entire share capital of The Colon Development Company, Ltd., a British corporation. A majority of the stock of Colon Oil Corporation to be presently outstanding will be owned by the Royal Dutch-Shell Group. The Corporation has arranged to enter into a contract of management with The Batavian Petroleum Company (De Bataafsche Petroleum Maatschappri).

CONCESSION AND ASSETS: The Colon Development Company, Ltd. owns a concession covering approximately 2,100,000 acres in the Maracaibo Basin of Venezuela, one of the richest oil areas in the world. Its properties definitely indicate geological similarity to those properties supporting major operations within this region. Since acquiring the concession, The Colon Development Company, Ltd. has expended approximately $12,000,000 in geological surveys, construction work, and in the drilling of more than 30 exploratory wells from which a daily capped production of approximately 13,000 barrels of high grade oil has been obtained and a large oil territory proven. Over nine hundred men are now engaged in work on the properties. Extensive facilities in housing, equipment and in river, road and rail transportation have been constructed by The Colon Development Company, Ltd. A consolidated statement of Colon Oil Corporation and The Colon Development Company, Ltd. as of June 30, 1928, will show no indebtedness of any character other than that incident to current items.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE: Proceeds of these $10,000,000 Debentures will be used primarily for the construction of a pipe line with a daily capacity of approximately 20,000 barrels, to cost about $2,500,000, the drilling of additional wells and for further expenditures estimated to be sufficient to develop the property to pipe line capacity. It is estimated that the Corporation's construction program preparatory to marketing oil will be completed within two years.

CONVERTIBILITY: The Debentures will be convertible at the option of the holder, at any time prior to maturity or the redemption date, into common stock of Colon Oil Corporation at the rate of 55 shares of no par value stock for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures. The Indenture will contain provisions to protect the conversion right against dilution through the issuance of additional common stock at less than $18.20

INDENTURE: The Indenture will further provide, in substance, among other things: that cash dividends shall not be paid upon the common stock of the Corporation unless an amount equal to the dividend so paid shall be concurrently applied to the retirement of Debentures; that the proceeds of the sale of any concession or any interest therein, or any shares of stock of any subsidiary company, shall likewise be applied to the retirement of Debentures; and that neither the Corporation nor any subsidiary company shall mortgage or pledge any of its assets (other than to the Corporation) without securing these Debentures equally and ratably with the obligations to be

These Debentures, being the obligation of a company whose properties are in the development stage, depend to a substantial extent for their security upon the future realization of present favorable indications. We believe they hold attractive possibilities.

PARE DEFEATS SEEDED PLAYER

Springs Surprise in Intercollegiate Lawn Tennis Singles-Appel Beats Lavine

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO HAVERFORD, Pa.—The colleges and universities of the East continued to dominate the play in the national intercollegiate tennis singles championship at the Merion Cricket Club here Wednesday, when four of the candidates from that section filled the brackets in the quarterfinal round, while, California has two, and the South and the Mississippi Valley one each. In the case of one of the eastern representatives, J. Emmett Pare of Cartestran Visic only fair to state Georgetown, it is only fair to state that he learned all his tennis in Chi-cago, where he is ranked third in the Western Association, just below G. M. Lott Jr. and J. F. Hennessey, and he should be credited to that section. The performance of Pare, who was unaccountably omitted from the seeding, shows he is a probable candidate for the highest honors in tennis in the near future. He broke the serried the near future. He broke the serried ranks of the seeded stars in fine style in his match Wednesday, when he disposed of Ralph T. McElvenny of Stanford University, California, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3, after the latter had eliminated Brainerd H. Whitbeck Jr., the Harvard captain, the day before. modern tennis.

Another surprise result was credited to Kenneth B. Appel of Princeton, when he disposed of the star player of the University of Pennsylvania,
Gabriel Lavine, also in straight sets, 6-3. 6-2. Appel is one of the most in-and-out players in the game, as his

Coward has such a name for comfort that people get an idea that Coward Shoes are sold exclusively to those whose feet are difficult to fit.

Wrong! Of course, when one simply has to have a special kind of shoe, Coward is the first thought that comes to mind. And in many such cases, Coward's is the only place where such a foot can be fitted at all.

But by far the greatest number of our customers have good feet. Some came with good feetrealizing that if they are to remain so, comfortable shoes must be worn. Others came, at first, with feet that were difficult to fit-now they are choosing their shoes from our newest and most modish styles.

The whole thing amounts to this: Some Coward Shoes are designed to fit difficult feet. Some are designed primarily for beauty's sake. But ALL are shoes that can be worn in comfort.

Rarely does one run across a more interesting or characteristic group of the work of some of the best of our "arrived" moderns. The collection is strikingly diverse. The one trait these artists may be said to share beside their recognized ability being a shrewd eye for the contemporary. Frequently it is a satirical eye, as in the wittily drawn tough types of Walt Kuhn and the farcical Mexicana of Pop Hart. On the other hand the approach may be wholly lyrical, as in Davies' landscapes and figures: Or arrive at the boldly original decorative character of Kuniyoshi's peculiar and striking blacks and whites. do with a very small amount. When Christmas morning came, however, the father and mother as well as the grandmother who lived with them were profoundly touched and somewhat puzzled to find that the children had given them gifts almost as costly as those formerly received, including a pretty little Japanese crumb tray and scraper that the mother had unsuspectingly dmired some time before. When gratitude and some astonshment were expressed to them, one of the children explained: "We saved all we could from our lunch money each day so we could get you and Daddy and Grandma something."

Across the Trestle

MRS. E. H. G., Albany, N. Y., sends a clipping from the Evening News of that city reporting an unusual act of courage. A man at-tempted to board a moving freight train just as it started over a trestle. Losing his footing, he clung desperately by his hands, but with legs dangling and scraping along the ties. John Fox was a witness to the incident, and alert to the peril involved, raced along the side of the train until he could catch up the man's feet; then holding them up with one arm, and steadying himself against the train with the other, he ran along the full length of the precarious trestle. After crossing, the man was enabled to jump to safety.

The Throne of Mars Is Tottering

THE unofficial responses which have already greeted Secretary Kellogg's renewed appeal to the fourteen nations to sign the multilateral treaty renouncing war, bring this momentous peace project to the brink of its realization. Mr. Kellogg's latest note is conceived in an atmosphere of conciliation and evident sincerity. While the text of the new draft remains unchanged, the American Secretary of State has in the preamble made it clear that the agreement does not impair the right of selfdefense, and that if any nation violates the treaty all others are automatically released with respect to that nation. Moreover, Mr. Kellogg expresses himself as open to any necessary alteration in the form of the pact, although he argues strongly for prompt and unqualified acceptance. The outlook is highly encouraging. The resubmission of the treaty with its essential provisions unscathed by the crossfire of earlier debate has called forth an acclaim from the press of Europe even more cordial and commendatory than when first proposed. A Paris dispatch indicates that little opposition will be encountered by the new pact; a London cable reports its approval as a foregone conclusion; Berlin makes clear the readiness of the Reich to adhere at once; Tokyo is in complete accord. It is not too much to hope that the official responses, soon to be forthcoming, will be in consonance with the widespread public approval which the treaty has so clearly and so spontaneously won.

The successful termination of these negotiations will ascribe a signal achievement to the still youthful record of public diplomacy. No treaty of this scope and significance has in all history been negotiated in the white light of such publicity. Every new note, favoring or dissenting from the draft, every change in phrase and suggested reservation, every unofficial reaction has been put before the peoples of all nations concerned. The treaty has stood the test of a public discussion which has invariably centered upon the points of disagreement. The treaty truly bespeaks the conviction of the peoples themselves, and therein rests the strength of its declaration and the source of its enforcement.

The Nationalists in South Africa

CHOULD the Nationalist Party of South Africa renounce its republican ideal? is a question that has been occupying the attention of General Hertzog's supporters ever since the recent Imperial Conference. After considerable rejuctance it has been decided that Article IV of the Nationalist Party constitution -an article which declared categorically that total secession from the British Empire was the ultimate aim of the party—is now obsolete. Hence preliminary steps have been taken to revise it, in order to bring it into harmony with the recent explicit declaration of the Prime Minister and other leaders of the party on the subject of inter-Imperial relations.

The proposed new clause has been drafted by the National Federal Council, the body which once held that it was absurd to suggest that complete sovereign independence could be attained while South Africa remained part of the British Empire. It is only when compared with the bold statement of aims, as expressed in the old article, that the new clause can be properly appreciated. The revised Article IV

The Nationalist Party accepts the declaration made by the Imperial Conference during its session of 1926, and aims at: Maintenance of our sovereign independence, thereby acknowledged: as also the execution of the functions of state on our own responsibility. In accordance herewith, the Nationalist Party declares itself expressly against any tendency, action, or policy tending to curtail or infringe in any way upon our liberties, and binds itself to oppose by every legitimate means such tendency, action or policy,

The alteration of this contentious clausewhich has aroused more bitterness than all the other articles in the Nationalist policy put together-might have the effect of bringing unanimity to the Nationalists themselves. Until the recent Imperial Conference members of the Nationalist Party differed a good deal in their interpretation of Article IV. While a section clung stubbornly to their view that sovereign independence implied secession, others, ignoring the declaration of the Federal Council, argued that sovereign independence did not necessarily connote republican independence, and the latter view is the one which, for obvious reasons, has been emphasized at general elec-

Explaining why it has been thought necessary to revise Article IV, instead of deleting it altogether, it is stated on behalf of the Nationalist Party that a revised clause will serve to show that sovereign independence, and the application of it in practice, has not become a dead letter. The proposed amendment describes the Nationalist Party's aim as "the upholding of South Africa's sovereign independence, recognized by the declaration of the Imperial Conference, and the execution of the functions of state on her own responsibility." "In all her actions, foreign as well as domestic," the amendment continues, "South Africa can recognize no other authority than her own. All functions of national life must be exercised by South Africa alone on her own authority."

The report of the Imperial Conference declares that every Dominion is the director of its own destinies, and the Nationalist Party has set itself the aim of seeing that so far as South Africa is concerned it is so in practice.

"By Any Other Name-"

PROM time immemorial it has been a custom among many persons in the Unit to hold presidential election years responsible for business depressions, small crops, industrial inactivity, spots on the sun, defective chimneys, and various other things. Perhaps, therefore, the fact that there is a decrease of 23 per cent in the acreage planted to onions in the Connecticut Valley, the headquarters of the onion family, may be attributed to the present presidential election year.

Although the onion always has been accredited with ability to defend itself and often with sufficient eloquence to bring tears to the eyes, it evidently is in need of a little outside help. The potato may have some advantage over the onion in general popularity, but there is no vegetable that can compete with the onion in the persistency of its manifestations through the entire range of culinary production. From soup to nuts it may appear half a dozen times before retiring from the menu. If gasoline is to be called the national perfume, then the onion may justly lay claim to the title of the national condiment. There is something about the onion that everybody likes, despite its forwardness. And then, too, the onion comes of a worthy lineage. Incredible as it may seem, it belongs to the lily family. It may be an outcast and ostracized by the other members of the lily clan, but it still remains a lily. To paraphrase an old quotation-a lily by any other name would smell like an onion. Surely this vegetable, which appears to be also a flower and bears the honored and proud name of Lily Monocotyledonous Onion, is not diminishing in popular favor even though the year of 1928 may show a decreased acreage in the Connecticut Valley,

An Interdependence Day?

THE proposal of the International Magna Charta Day Association that June 15 be set aside as an Interdependence Day by the seven English-speaking nations of the worlda proposal which has recently received recognition from a number of governors, mayors, clergymen, educators and statesmen in the nations involved—serves to emphasize aspects of international relationship which are, perhaps, not generally considered, but which might, in the fullness of time, be instrumental in establishing a kinship of ideals among the nations of

No matter how irreconcilable seem the differences which have faced in the past and may again face the seven English-speaking nations, there is at least one common ground where those who claim English as their mother tongue may gather. That ground is Magna Charta.

Undoubtedly many of the legislative ideals of the present time, practiced by the Englishspeaking nations, have roots extending back through the years to the Great Charter. The pursuit of liberty and privilege of law which the barons of King John's day demanded and obtained on the meadow of Runnymede that June day in 1215 have resulted in greater freedom and a higher concept of law for the whole Anglo-Saxon civilization.

An important adjunct to the common observance of Magna Charta Day is the emphasis given its subtitle: "An interdependence day of the seven English-speaking nations." The time seems ripe for a more general adoption of the idea of interdependence in the foreign policies of all nations. Such international felicity must have its beginning somewhere, and it would seem that Magna Charta Day, serving as a link to bind the English-speaking peoples of the world in closer fellowship, might likewise establish a proper sense of interdependence in the world's consciousness.

With a common heritage of liberty, law and culture growing out of the Great Charter, it seems entirely fitting that a day be set aside to commemorate, not so much the charter itself, perhaps, as the common ideals of government that have grown out of that charter—a day set aside not for the glorification of Great Britain or Canada, Australia or South Africa, New Zealand, Newfoundland or the United States, but a day dedicated to mutual amity and consecration to the ideals which have led to a greater respect for law, a deeper understanding of the duties of citizenship, a keener appreciation of rightly constituted authority.

On this ground the seven English-speaking and kindred nations can surely meet and cooperate, and, through a closer unity of purpose, exert a profound influence in establishing throughout the world a government of law, rather than one of force.

America's Shipping Prospects

AURENCE R. WILDER, in the American Mutual Magazine, writes most optimistically of the salutary effect of the Jones-White Bill in stimulating the American merchant marine. It will, he contends, inevitably give a new impetus to the shipping industry in the United States. The fact that the present fleet of seagoing ships is negligible may turn out to be an advantage after all. Marine architecture, he avers, will of a necessity change to meet modern conditions. Not only will faster ships be constructed, but provision will be made for the carrying of airplanes and for their landing and departure. By this means the transatlantic journey will be considerably shortened for both mail and passengers at either end. This enterprise calls for a new type of ship after the plan of the Saratoga, which is especially designed to accommodate airplane service. Masts and stacks must be placed at one side, to afford a clear upper deck. All this, however, is but an incident to be arranged with expedition and foresight.

The voyage by four-day ships already projected will, by the use of airplanes, be reduced from four to three days. Moreover, the device for handling cargo already thoroughly tried out on the Great Lakes will notably reduce the length of stay of the ships in port, thus keeping them more constantly at sea. As the earning capacity of a ship is operative only when at sea, this will materially increase the earnings.

While the Jones-White Bill as passed provided for but a comparatively small subsidy, not enough to enable American built, owned and manned ships to compete with the commerce of other nations, yet it seems that the introduction of new devices to shorten the stay in port and to increase the speed, and the carrying of airplanes may make the United States again a formidable competitor in ocean-carrying trade. Since three-fourths of all transatlantic travelers are American, it would seem that the enterprise so projected will have a promising outlook for success.

There should be no ground for resentment among other nations, if the United States should provide larger facilities for the carrying of passengers and goods, the trade which they have enjoyed for so long a time. It seems certain that the element of time will enter largely into the problem.

The Green Internationale

TNTERNATIONAL associations like to choose for themselves an emblematic color. We have the Red Internationale, which is revolutionary. We have the White Internationale, which is reactionary. Now we have the Green Internationale, which is, according to its professions, pacific and democratic. It is the union of agriculturists in central Europe. The farmer, the peasant, are the backbone of the Danubian countries, and they wish to join hands in a common policy regardless of frontiers. They desire to form a peasant democracy which will make all the discussion about boundaries appear foolish, or at least subsidiary.

Agrarian movements there have long been in Europe, and in fact in many lands the workers on the soil have received satisfactions since the war that would previously have appeared to be Utopian. Indeed, one of the most difficult problems which came before the League of Nations concerned the compensation that Rumania should accord to Hungarian subjects who, like the Rumanians themselves, saw their land taken to be parceled out among smaller holders. In Russia the peasant has been partially enfranchised. In Bulgaria the agrarian party pushed matters to extremes. In Poland there are strong peasant organizations. In Czechoslovakia and other countries of central Europe the farmers take up a commanding position. In fact it is in Czechoslovakia that the Green Internationale was born.

The thought underlying the formation of this latest recruit to the rainbow army of Internationales is that a nationalism based on the soil should not be antagonistic to others. It is explained, for example, that in the comparatively narrow confines of Czechoslovakia, where there are Czechs and Germans and Slovaks and others who have not always been on good terms with each other, the notion of a peasant democracy has been exceedingly helpful. The different races have united to work together in their common interest. The great thing is to find the common denominator. It appears to have been found in Czechoslovakia.

Why should it not be extended to other countries? That was the question which was posed in Prague. If racial differences could be obliterated inside the country, why not outside the country? Why should Austrians and Hungarians and Rumanians and Jugoslavians and the rest be jealous of each other? A Hungarian farmer has the same needs as a Rumanian farmer. What, in the last analysis, does it matter what the soil to which he is attached is called? He has his soil, whether it is Austrian or Italian by name. So there has developed a larger patriotism.

This does not mean that in itself the plan will solve the problems of central Europe. It may or may not be desirable to break down the sentiment of nationalism, and probably it cannot be done at this stage. But it can be modified and made of friendly import. Anything which helps the central European peoples to realize their unity and to brood less on their divisions, to think in terms of humanity and not in terms of boundary posts, will tend to consolidate European peace.

Editorial Notes

St. Petersburg has been successively, in recent years, Petrograd and Leningrad; Christiania in Norway is now Oslo, the Irish have renamed Queensland, Cobh, and Turkey tried to change Constantinople, which was once Byzantium. to honor Kemal Pasha. Now the Chinese Nationalists have changed Peking to Peiping; but London, Paris, Berlin and Rome go on as always.

The editor of the London Sunday Express, answering a critic who had asserted that Longfellow was no poet, declares he was "the Henry Ford of poetry" who reached all the people but "never wrote a line for the expert, the critic or the connoisseur." Perhaps that is why Englishmen have accorded his name a place in Westminster Abbey-in "Poets' Corner."

The Des Moines Register says: "The air will not soon be overcrowded, for it will be a long while before planes are selling for $500 on the installment plan." Somehow this sounds not unlike the items in papers of twenty-five years ago referring to automobiles.

Could members of the canine world say "Thank you," many would bark their approval of the act of the Governor of Massachusetts, who has signed a law against ear cropping.

A Visit to Some of the Little Houses of Transylvania

VERY pleasant it is to be a guest in a beautiful, large house, to eat in a solemn, darkly tinted dining room the lips, which is taken up by that liquid "la" and car--from a table covered with fine linen and fragile dishes and strewn so thickly with shining pieces of silver that one trembles lest he handle them wrongly-to go up to sleep in a quiet, spacious, well-aired guest room and after reveling in the delights of a thick rug against bare feet, to crawl leisurely between fresh, friendly sheets on a wide and stately bed. I enjoy that-very much.

But it is also pleasant to be a guest in a tiny house, in which ardent hosts cordially and insistently invite you to sit with them at the kitchen table and in which the family sleeps on the floor of one room that you may enjoy their only bed in the other. At least I enjoy that. So I recently took a trip through Transylvania, accompanied by a friend who was born in Transylvania and has spent many years in the United States. On this trip we visited many tiny, well-kept houses. This land was once a part of Hungary, but now forms the largest of the new provinces in "Greater Rumania."

We leave Bucharest, the capital of Rumania, at noor and travel north by fast train over the vast level Wallachian plain and over the forest-covered Carpathian Mountains. We get off the train at the large city of Brashov and see at once that we are in Transylvania. We walk a long way down the railroad track to the Rumanian quarter, passing hundreds of little brick houses, and finally stop at one which is a little better than its neighbors.

Its owner is a young shoemaker, and his shop is in the third room of the house. In the small front yard are some grass and newly planted flower beds. In the back yard are the pigpen and the chicken coop. We are met with great cordiality and taken through the kitchen to the front room. About the walls are hung pretty painted plates and frames containing placards with verses from the

In the corner of the front room is a table with a beautiful hand-woven and hand-decorated cover on which are several books and an accordion. Soon the six-year-old son of the family, an only child, comes in and fond parents ask him to play on the accordion. We listen to several hymns which we are able to recognize. We drink raspberry syrup and eat cookies, and talk. All are vivacious and ardent, for the Rumanians are an emotional people and enjoy friends and guests and comrades.

However hard the times are and however difficult the day's work, the Rumanians smile when they meet their And they are largely free from enmity and hatred. They do not cherish bitterness. They seldom speak ill of the Hungarians and Germans. They seem to prefer the brighter things in daily existence and are usually full of hope. The Rumanians have almost never engaged in fierce religious wars. They do not foment rebellions. They try to avoid fighting and are more inclined to smile. + + +

Other guests come in and we talk of the United States and Rumania, of old times under the Hungarians, of present times under the Rumanian Government, of future hopes and aspirations. We talk of our children and homes and fields and work, of churches and schools and service in the army, of political parties and taxes and customs and laws until the other guests go home. Then the hostess and her little son go to the kitchen to sleep, while my companion, our host and myself divide the two beds in the front room among us. A whole bed falls to me and I sleep soundly with a crackly straw tick beneath me and a large feather tick snuggling over and about me.

The next morning we leave for Blaj, near the center of Transvivania. The town is small and ordinary in appearance, but what a robust name it has! For that last "j" | Slavic instead of a Latin tongue.

ried to that decisive long-drawn "zh" at the end, which you speak with your teeth set. I could hardly think of a bolder and more challenging one-syllable name, and if I should ever have to tell a story about a hero with flashing eyes and black beard and a coat of mail I'd certainly

Indeed, this humble little town has been a hero, for it was here that the Rumanians, during their millennium of bondage, when they were considered an inferior race by their foreign rulers, preserved the fires of their national culture, language and tradition-it was here they had their principal schools, the strongholds of their Rumanian consciousness.

4 4 4 We then walk to a village four miles away. It is dark when we arrive, But my companion soon finds the house of an acquaintance and we are cordially invited into the tiny kitchen of a small two-roomed village house. Our host is a genuine peasant. He has just come in from plowing. A very pretty child is sitting on the bed. Cabbage is boiling on a little tin stove. By a table are two chairs.

Our host sits down on a bench by the wall and removes his moccasins and stockings. However, they are not really stockings but rectangular pieces of white cloth, perhaps parts of an old sheet. Millions of peasants in this part of Europe and the Near East wear such stockings. Our peasant knocks the dirt out of these cloths, wraps them about his feet again and ties on his moccasins. Now he's ready to talk to us.

He tells us of his fields. He is happy, because through the agrarian reform he has received five acres of good land. His fall wheat is excellent. Spring plowing is going well. He is glad to be free from Hungary, though he has no hatred for the many Hungarians in his village.

We drink some fresh milk and eat a little bread and then go to see a neighbor. He is a prosperous man and has a large house-three rooms, that is, a vestibule with a living room on one side and a front room on the other. We pass into the living room. A kerosene lamp is burning on the wall. A very high bed stands in one corner with a bench beside it. At the end of the bed are a cupboard and a little stove. In another corner is a table surrounded by a father, his two sons and a daughter-in-law. And they are all eating supper.

Here is Rumania before us! A peasant family beside its hearth and about its dining table! On a little flat board is a firm square mold of boiled corn meal. It keeps its shape as a loaf of bread. This is "mamliga," the feod that millions of Rumanian peasant families live on. Beside the corn meal is a string by means of which the daughterin-law cuts off slices as they are wanted. Two bowls sit in the middle of the table; in one of them is a stew and in the other a green salad, made of some wild flower. Our hosts all have forks and spoons and they all eat from the

Our hosts finish their supper. The young woman puts the corn meal back in the cupboard, wipes the forks on the tablecloth, washes the spoons and bowls, and brushes up the crumbs. Other guests come in and we all go to prayer meeting.

Then we went to many other little peasant homes clustered about cities in all parts of Transylvania, after which I left for Belgrade, the capital of Jugoslavia, and traveled all day past other two-roomed peasants' houses, where other people plow and reap and scythe, spin and weave and carry babies on their backs, cart pigs and ducks to market and dance folk dances and go to church and differ from the Rumanian peasants only in that they speak a

From the World's Great Capitals-Rome

THERE is at least one place in Italy where freedom of speech is not interfered with by the Government and the Fascist authorities, and this is the Italian Senate. A recent incident which occurred during the examination of the departmental budgets shows that the president of the upper house, who is responsible both for the regularity of the debates and for the respect of the traditional privileges of Parliament, is firmly determined that its members shall be absolutely free to express their views on questions of public interest. During the last session it was noticed that Ettore Ciccotti, a senator who belongs to what might be described as the Opposition Party, had delivered three speeches in three successive sittings of the Senate, strongly criticizing the policy of the Fascist Government. When he rose for the fourth time to deliver another speech, he addressed himself to the president, and apologized for making still another speech, adding that he believed it was his duty, both as a citizen and as a senator, to criticize the present Administration, "Your remarks are perfectly unjustified," replied Signor Tittoni, the president of the Senate, "because nobody questions your right to take part in the debate. Freedom of speech is guaranteed to all in this house, and I am here to see that it is duly respected." These words were greeted with applause by the entire house.

4 4 4 The King of Italy, the diplomatic corps and members of the Italian Government were present at the inauguration of the new International Institute for the Unification of Private Law at the Villa Aldobrandini. Favorably impressed by the successful work accomplished by the Institute of Intellectual Co-operation at Paris, the Fascist Government offered the League of Nations to open an institute in Rome whose object would be to study the means for harmonizing and unifying private law among states or groups of states, and to prepare gradually for the adoption by the various states of a uniform system of private law. The offer was gratefully accepted by the League, and the Italian Government has undertaken to sustain all the expense for the upkeep of the new institute. The work to be performed by the institute will be laid down by a special council composed of a president and ten members, while the task of carrying out the decision of this council will be intrusted to a restricted committee of five members belonging to different nationalities. The choice of Rome as the seat of the institute is no doubt a happy one, for modern Rome has not renounced its ancient title of "the mother of jurisprudence." The task of the institute is undoubtedly delicate and difficult, but the first attempts will be limited to those branches of law where unification is not only possible, but also practicable. The recommendations of legal experts of world-wide reputation will be submitted to the various governments for the necessary legislative action.

The palace formerly belonging to the late Queen Margherita of Italy has now been acquired by the Fascist Federation of Agriculture. The palace, which is situated in the very heart of modern Rome, and in the most tashionable quarter of the city, will be used for agricultural exhibits. The King gave his consent to the sale after receiving assurances that the palace would not be used for other purposes. The interior decoration will not be changed, and the reception rooms used by the first Queen of United Italy will retain the pictures and furniture as arranged by the late Queen.

+ + + Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Italian soldier-poet, has just finished writing a new book entitled, "Il Compagno dagli Occhi senza Cigli," or "The Companion With Lashless Eyes." In his new work, which is dedicated to the great actress Eleonora Duse, and which is said to be written in the purest Tuscan style, the poet describes his early years and his middle-age reminiscences. The title of the book is no doubt strange, but its name is derived from the first chapter, which tells of D'Annunzio's early years | lets, and several other objects of silver.

at the Cicognini College at Prato, near Florence, where one of his greatest friends was a boy without evelashes. The book, which forms part of the poet's collection of writings known under the name of "Faville del Maglio," was written at the villa on the Lake Garda, where the poet lives in complete seclusion. It will certainly be a notable contribution to contemporary Italian literature, and will disclose many events of the early life of Italy's national poet which are not known. It is stated that the poet is now busy writing a new tragedy to be performed by the two sisters, Emma and Irma Grammatica.

+ + + For the second time Italy has had her "Book Day," and this year the initiative taken by publishers and writers to encourage the buying of books has proved so successful that it is safe to say that similar Book Days will be held again in the future. In every Italian city, large or small, special stands were erected in the principal square, and there books of all kinds and dealing with the most varied subjects, were put on sale at much reduced prices. The crowd, mostly composed of young men and women, showed the greatest interest in these fairs, and it was noted with satisfaction that the works of young authors had a sale exceeding all expectation. In Rome the fair was of an imposing character; the stands were erected in the Piazza Venezia, and the progress of the sale was witnessed by many prominent public men and by the civic authorities. The number of books sold throughout the day is not yet known, but judging from the satisfaction of the publishers it must have been considerable.

+ + + A recent investigation ordered by the Italian Minister of Finance for the purpose of taxation has disclosed that the total capital invested by foreign companies in Italy 637,393,533 lire. There are 271 foreign companies in Italy belonging to seventeen different nationalities, and the capital invested by them for enterprises in Italy is comparatively small when compared to about 40,000,000 lire invested by Italian companies. As regards the number of foreign companies, France heads the list with ninety-three, followed by Great Britain, Switzerland, Belgium and Germany, but as regards capital invested, Belgium comes first with 250,000,000 lire. Most of this foreign capital is invested in transport services, aqueducts and gas, while agricultural and industrial interests have so far attracted small attention by foreign investors.

+ + + While the performances of outdoor operas have become quite common in the Italian summer season, the scheme that has just been approved by the Venice municipal authorities to give operas in the great square of St. Mark's is certainly striking for its novelty. The operas to be given this year are "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagli-A special stage will be constructed capable of holding 500 performers, and dressing rooms for the artists will be erected near the stage. Many of the principal singers of the Scala of Milan have been engaged for these exceptional performances, and accommodation will be provided for about 10,000 spectators. Five performances of the two operas will be given in July and August, when the City of the Doges will be most crowded by tourists.

Near the small town of Canosa, in the vicinity of Taranto, in Southern Italy, not far from the spot where one of the most famous battles in Roman history was fought between the Romans and the Carthaginians, several tombs have been discovered in the course of digging for a drain. Many tombs had been found in the neighborhood several years ago and the new find is interesting because the tombs contained many beautiful specimens of Roman jewelry which, fortunately, have been found entire. Among the objects discovered were a crown in massive gold with artistically entwined foliage and inlaid with precious stones, a collar of small pearls, a gold leaf, pieces of a casket decorated with scales of serpent, brace-
